- 7:22 PM Growing up can be a bumpy road, and it's no exception for Riley, who is uprooted from her Midwest life when her father starts a new job in San Francisco. She settles into her new life, but when a beautiful teacher moves in next door, Riley starts to question everything she thought she knew about her father and herself. Riley knows she's a fake - it's part of her job. But one look at the teacher is all it takes to realize that she's the real deal - and the only person who can save her. Riley's father is a magician - he can perform magic tricks and make food levitate. That's the way he makes his living. The problem is that his talents aren't enough to support a family - or save them when Riley's mother commits suicide. As Riley grows up, her father's magic has to be hidden. He has to bury his past, and he has to keep his distance from the only woman who wants him in her life - not to mention protecting her from her father's magic tricks and the danger that comes with being an innocent young woman. It's a story of hope, loss, and love - a love that will change a girl's life and make the world a little more magical. Excerpt: Riley looked around the manor, inhaling the fresh smell of dried flowers and fresh paint. It was a house her father had designed, and when he'd gotten the job in San Francisco, she'd said she'd go live there with him. Now, he was in the middle of a construction project that was supposed to finish in a month, and here she was, stuck in her room with her mother. "Riley," a gentle voice said. "Riley?" Riley looked up. Her friend Taylor stood in the doorway. Her blond hair curled around her shoulders, and she wore a white T-shirt and yoga pants. "Are you all right?" Taylor asked. "Yes," Riley said, trying to smile. "I'm fine." Taylor walked closer. Her eyes widened. "Are you crazy?" she whispered. "You look a little...upset. How long have you been like this?" Riley groaned. "For the last two days." "Riley, what's going on?" "Something terrible happened," Riley said, choking on the
